Seeking favors, Trump asked Ukraine president to investigate Biden

Summary of call released day after impeachment inquiry launch.

President Donald Trump pressed Ukraine's president to investigate a political rival, former Vice President Joe Biden, in coordination with the U.S. attorney general and Trump's personal lawyer, according to a summary of a telephone call released by the Trump administration on Wednesday.

The official account of the half-hour July call laid bare an astonishing exchange of requests, pledges and ingratiation, including some unrelated to Biden, such as when Trump asked President Volodymyr Zelensky "to do us a favor" involving a controversy arising from the 2016 U.S. presidential campaign.

The summary was released a day after U.S. House of Representatives Speaker Nancy Pelosi said the Democratic-led chamber was launching an official impeachment inquiry, setting up a political showdown that threatens Trump's presidency as he campaigns for re-election in 2020.

The details of the July 25 call drew furious reactions from Democrats, who accused Trump of soliciting Ukraine's help to smear Biden, the frontrunner among Democratic candidates seeking to challenge the Republican president in the November 2020 election.

> "What those notes reflect is a classic Mafia-like shakedown of a foreign leader."
> Rep. Adam Schiff

The call occurred after Trump had ordered a freeze of nearly $400 million in American aid to Ukraine, which the administration only later released.

"What those notes reflect is a classic Mafia-like shakedown of a foreign leader," said Democrat Adam Schiff, chairman of the House Intelligence Committee.

Republicans said it showed Democrats were wrong to move forward with impeachment. "There was no quid pro quo and nothing to justify the clamor House Democrats caused," said Doug Collins of Georgia, the top Republican on the House Judiciary Committee.

Trump and Zelensky appeared side by side in New York on the sidelines of the U.N. General Assembly and denied impropriety in their call, with Ukraine's president telling reporters: "Nobody pushed me."

At a news conference closing out three days of meetings in New York around the United Nations General Assembly, Trump accused Democrats of launching the impeachment inquiry "because they can't beat us at the ballot."

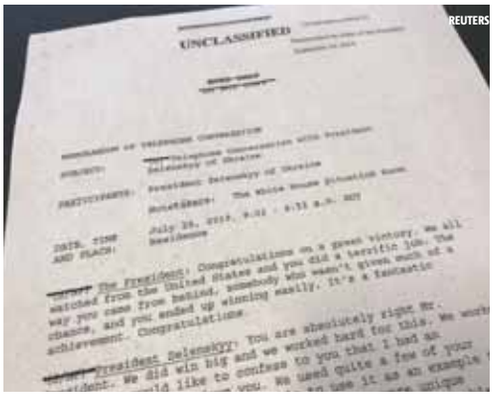
In a statement, Biden said Trump put personal politics above his oath of office and that Congress must hold him to account for "his abuse of power."

The controversy arose after a whistleblower from within the U.S. intelligence community brought a complaint relating to Trump's conversation with Zelensky.

Members of the House and Senate Intelligence committees were allowed to see the complaint on Wednesday, the day before acting U.S. director of national intelligence, Joseph Maguire, testifies at a House intelligence panel hearing.

Democratic lawmakers said the allegations were credible and deeply disturbing, while Republicans largely downplayed the complaint. Chuck Schumer, the U.S. Senate's top Democrat, called for the complaint to be released.

"The public has a right to read the whistleblower's complaint for themselves. The contents of the complaint should be made public immediately," he said in a statement. REUTERS



Amazon: Samuel L. Jackson first celeb to voice Alexa

2 Amazon.com Inc. on Wednesday said actor Samuel L. Jackson and other celebrities will voice speech for the company's virtual assistant Alexa, while the voice aid will also be built into a new wearable line of earbuds, eyeglasses and a ring. The news, along with announcements of a new range of voice-controlled Echo speakers, a multilingual mode for Alexa and an additional privacy feature for deleting voice recordings regularly, underscores the investment the world's largest online retailer is putting into voice-controlled computing, a new area of technology in which it is competing against Alphabet Inc.'s Google Assistant and Apple Inc.'s Siri. Amazon's celebrity voice feature will cost $0.99, Senior Vice President David Limp said at an event in Seattle. Jackson's is the only celebrity voice Amazon has disclosed so far. REUTERS

IKEA reports record sales as online revenue surges

3 IKEA reported annual sales above 40 billion euros ($44 billion) for the first time on Wednesday as the Swedish furniture group's push into e-commerce produced another surge in online revenue. IKEA was slow to embrace online services but since 2017 the world's biggest furniture retailer has invested heavily to adapt to new shopping habits and competition from digital rivals such as Amazon and made.com. In the 12 months to the end of August, IKEA said it sold goods and services worth 41.3 billion euros, a 6 percent rise from 38.8 billion last year including a 43 percent jump in online revenue. The addition of new stores also boosted sales. Besides developing digital and other services such as furniture delivery and assembly, IKEA has set up stores in the heart of cities such as Paris which serve as showrooms, also helping to drive more online orders once shoppers return home. Tinder, OkCupid owner sued for using fake profiles in ads

4 The owner of Tinder and OkCupid is being sued by U.S. regulator for seeking to draw in potential subscribers with emails from fake users expressing interest in pairing up. The U.S. Federal Trade Commission on Wednesday alleged that Match Group Inc. knowingly sent automated advertisements via Match.com with expressions of interest from accounts which it knew were likely fake. The emails in question, which did not include user pictures, told recipients that a particular profile had expressed interest in them and gave them a link to click to see details, leading to a subscription page. "The FTC has misrepresented internal emails and relied on cherry-picked data to make outrageous claims and we intend to vigorously defend ourselves," Match Group said. The FTC said some users had purchased subscriptions to see the details of the users. REUTERS

E-cigarette maker facing scrutiny, bans as teen use surges.

The chief executive of e-cigarette maker Juul stepped down on Wednesday as merger talks between its biggest investor Altria and Philip Morris collapsed in the face of a regulatory backlash against vaping that could reshape the industry.

Juul Labs, in which tobacco giant Altria Group owns a 35 percent stake, is facing intense scrutiny in its home market as teen use of e-cigarettes surges. The company, which faces a U.S. ban on some products, said on Wednesday that it would suspend all advertising in the country.

Marlboro makers Philip Morris International and Altria, announcing the end of their $187 billion merger talks, said they would instead focus on the joint launch of tobacco-heating product iQOS in the United States.

"It appears to us the talks fell apart over Juul," Wells Fargo analyst Bonnie Herzog wrote in a note, adding she was not surprised, given the litany of negative health headlines. Philip Morris and Altria did not mention the e-cigarette firm, however.

Vaping devices such as Juul's, which vaporize liquid containing nicotine, have borne the brunt of the regulatory crackdown globally.

The iQOS, which heats but does not burn tobacco, is a rival non-smoking technology and, crucially, has been authorized by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA).

When the talks were announced last month, the potential for Juul and iQOS to dominate the biggest vaping markets globally was seen as central to the logic of a deal. It would have seen the tobacco companies reunite a decade after their split and created an industry heavyweight with a combined market value of $187 billion, triple its closest rival British American Tobacco.

However, some investors were skeptical of the synergies the deal would generate and a steady rise in number of vaping-related deaths and illnesses reported in the United States may also have changed the companies' thinking.

"After much deliberation, the companies have agreed to focus on launching iQOS in the U.S. as part of their mutual interest to achieve a smoke-free future," Philip Morris CEO André Calantzopoulos said.

The Trump administration in the United States has announced plans to remove all flavored e-cigarettes from store shelves due to the rising appeal among teenagers.

The share of high school students using e-cigarettes has doubled over the past two years, with 27.5 percent reporting they had tried an e-cigarette in the past month.

The share of high school students using e-cigarettes has more than doubled over the past two years, with 27.5 percent reporting they had tried an e-cigarette in the past month, according to preliminary federal data released this month.

U.S. health officials are investigating an outbreak of hundreds of severe lung illnesses and nine deaths linked to vaping.

In its announcements on Wednesday, Juul also said it would not lobby the administration over the proposed ban on flavored products.

The FDA earlier this month warned the company about marketing its products as safer than traditional cigarettes and requested more documents and information within 30 days.

Federal prosecutors in California are conducting a criminal probe into e-cigarette maker Juul, the Wall Street Journal reported on Tuesday, though the focus of the probe was unclear. REUTERS

The Coffin of Nedjemankh that was returned to Egypt. THE MET

Stolen gold coffin, illegally sold to Met Museum of Art, returned to Egypt

Manhattan DA tracked down the tomb.

The gilded coffin of a high-ranking ancient Egyptian priest, which had been buried, looted and illegally sold before going on public display at a New York museum, was returned on Wednesday to Egyptian authorities.

The coffin of Nedjemankh, which dates back to the first century B.C., came to New York two years ago by way of a global art underground network before being sold to an unwitting Metropolitan Museum of Art for $4 million, authorities said.

"Thus far our investigation has determined that this coffin is just one of hundreds of antiquities stolen by the same multinational trafficking ring," Manhattan District Attorney Cyrus Vance said at a repatriation ceremony.

"So, you may well see a few more significant seizures," he added.

Vance credited his office's two-year-old Antiquities Trafficking Unit with untangling a web of forged documents to track down the coffin's true origin.

The unit focuses on the high-powered New York art world, with its museums, galleries and auction houses, much the same as the Federal Bureau of Investigation's Art Crime Team does on a national scale.

The highly ornamented coffin had been buried in Egypt for 2,000 years before it was stolen from the country's Minya region after the political upheaval of October 2011, authorities said. From there, it went on an underworld odyssey through the United Arab Emirates, Germany, France and New York, they said.

After it had been on display for six months, agents for the District Attorney's Office presented the Metropolitan Museum with evidence early this year that its ownership history documents, including one that suggested the coffin had been exported from Egypt in 1971, were forgeries.

The museum announced last February that it had been defrauded when it bought the coffin and was cooperating with the district attorney's investigation.

The coffin, which is inscribed with the name Nedjemankh, a priest of the ram-headed god Heryshef of Herakleopolis, will now go back to Egypt, where it will be put on display next year, Egyptian Minister of Foreign Affairs Sameh Hassan Shoukry said.

"This is not only for Egyptians but this is for our common human heritage and our sense that we all share in the values and we all are one of the same international family," Shoukry said at the repatriation ceremony. REUTERS

Doctors Urge Knee Pain Sufferers

"Don't Get ANY Surgery Until You SeeThis…"

After Years Of Intense Study, NYC Medical Clinic Finally Reveals It's Best "Treatment Formula" For Helping Knee Arthritis Sufferers... Especially When So Many Other Treatments Have Failed

NEW YORK CITY - If you are even remotely interested in discovering how the latest scientific discoveries can possibly help your knee pain... then this is going is be the most exciting information you ever read.

Here is why: Knee pain can not only be brutal... it's complex. In other words, it's not a simple, easy fix.

But I'm sure you already know that. Or you wouldn't be reading this.

That's the bad news.

Now for some good news...

Over the years, NYC Pain MD has treated countless knee pain sufferers. And in that time have been able to constantly improve.

And we have come up with a treatment formula that we have found works best and helps the most patients.

This formula has reduced or even eliminated the pain in many. Some were scheduled for knee replacement surgery and felt good enough to cancel their surgery.

It's amazing when patients who were once in excruciating pain... start feeling better. And start walking again. And playing golf. Or tennis. And finally getting their lives back.

Especially when they had gone to other doctors and tried so many other things.

So many had given up hope.

Sound familiar? If it does... check this out...

The Treatment Formula

While I can't give you the entire treatment formula here (there is not enough space and WAY too complicated) I can give you the basics. And more important... I can tell you what it might be able to do for YOU.

The first and most important part of the formula is: PATIENT SELECTION.

This means, NYC Pain MD has a detailed screening process to tell who is most likely to be helped by their treatments... and who is not.

If you qualify, you have the opportunity to move forward and experience the worldclass treatments that NYC Pain MD offers.

If you do not, NYC Pain MD will tell you what they think your best options are and help you find the right doctor for you.

NYC Pain MD "Treatment Formula" A protocol of advanced medical treatments that has already helped thousands.

If you qualify, NYC Pain MD offers some of the most advanced medical treatments available today all using the most advanced imaging technology including:

- Viscosupplementation (gel injections)
- Platelet Rich Plasma (PRP)
- Stem Cell Therapy (Lipogems)
- Genicular Knee Block
- And more.

Once again, there is not enough space to go into detail about all these procedures... but here are some things you MUST KNOW....

Viscosupplementation is where a doctor introduces a gel-like medicine directly into the joint space. This helps to lubricate the joints often relieving some, most or even all of your pain. Results can last for 6 months to several years.

Many have had these treatments without good results. However, NYC Pain MD feels this is because doctors often do these "gel injections" without advanced imaging to guide them. Research shows they will often miss the joint. If the joint is missed... it is impossible for the treatment to work.

NYC Pain MD has spared no expense and used advanced imaging to guide the injections assuring the medicine gets into the joint. We frequently get results when this treatment was a failure done elsewhere.

The second thing you must know is... our treatment plans are custom made for every patent. And we have all these treatments offered in the same place. Many times you will get the best results from multiple treatments. At NYC Pain MD your doctors will all be there and will all know each other and you and your case. They work together and give you the best treatments and care without you having to go anywhere else.

The ability to select the right patients and then have the potential to give them any or all of these treatments... with all the necessary medical technology... under one roof... has allowed NYC Pain MD to get better results than they thought possible.

Here's What You Should Do Next

If you suffer with knee pain... and any of this made sense to you... NYC Pain MD would like to offer you a No-cost screening. That screening is the first step in our "Treatment Formula."

You will get to see a doctor and ask any questions you have. Your doctor will take the first steps to see if you qualify for treatments and give you recommendations.

The best thing is... you will finally get direction. You will know what's going on and what is your best course of action… step-by-step. The treatments will be explained in detail and you will breathe a big sigh of relief finally knowing what's going on and what can or cannot be done.

There is so much we want to say to help you... but I'm out of space. Give us a call at 877-296-6310 and take the first step. That step is free without obligation.

Here are the most searched-for foods in NYC, according to Yelp

Broccoli rabe is among New Yorkers' most searched-for items on Yelp. ISTOCK

Yelp is celebrating its 15th anniversary, and to commemorate it they are reflecting on some of the biggest tastes, words and trends that occurred within the past few years. Looking back at 200 million reviews and 40 million compliments, here's what they found out about New York City.

Yelp did some research, by comparing the language in reviews for specific cities to Yelp nationwide, to help determine what each major city is looking for when it comes to dining.

Metro spoke Tara Lewis, Yelp Trend Expert, about New York food trends and asked if Lewis was shocked by any of the trends. She said, "Who would've guessed New Yorkers love broccoli rabe more than pizza or bagels?"

200M

Looking back at 200 million reviews and 40 million compliments, here's what Yelp found out about NYC.

Besides localized data, Yelp looked at national data as well. Here's what they discovered about 2019.

In 2019, foods that have seen the most significant spikes in popularity on Yelp were oat milk, CBD, the Impossible burger, Açai bowl, and street corn. Currently, cuisine trends in cities across the United States are Filipino, Hawaiian, Hot Pot, Tex-Mex, and Vegan.

> Tara Lewis, Yelp Trend Expert

Besides broccoli rabe being a favorite, here's what New York City's top searched-for words are: Shake Shack, broccoli rabe, grilled octopus, scallion pancake, pork bun, fresh mozzarella, ferry, Mexican, rice ball, prix-fixe, hero, pork dumpling and soba. Although these are a few of the top searched-for items, to look at more of the top searched terms, go to yelp15.com.

On a national scale, Metro noted that Mexican food and scallion pancakes seemed to top multiple cities' lists, including New York City's. Metro was curious if Lewis was surprised by the rise in these items and Lewis told Metro, "Mexican cuisine has steadily risen over the last 15 years on Yelp. Similarly, Chinese has remained a top cuisine on Yelp, so it's no surprise scallion pancakes are popular among Yelpers in these cities."

With 2020 around the corner, Metro asked Lewis what we should expect to grow in popularity. She said, "The Impossible Burger was nearly nonexistent before 2016 but is on track to be one of the biggest food searches of 2019 as it gets added to menus across the country.

"With three months left in the year, we may see new flavors and ingredients pop up on menus and in Yelp reviews."

Senate votes to end Trump's border emergency declaration — again

President's first veto, in March, struck down a similar measure that had cleared Congress.

Trump vetoed the first resolution to end the border emergency in March. REUTERS

The U.S. Senate voted on Wednesday for a second time to end the national emergency on the southern border the president declared in February, a move Donald Trump would almost certainly veto if it reached his desk.

Trump, with his very first veto, struck down a similar measure that had cleared both the House and Senate in March. Congress was unable to muster the votes to override that veto.

The Senate vote to approve the resolution was 54-41.

Trump declared the emergency on the southern border to circumvent Congress and take money already designated for other programs to pay for his U.S.-Mexico border wall, which he promised to build during his 2016 campaign.

Democratic lawmakers said the move was an unconstitutional power grab that undercut Congress' power of the purse, or the ability to tax and spend public money for the national government.

Republicans insisted Trump had acted legally under a 1976 law known as the National Emergencies Act, under which previous presidents had declared dozens of emergencies.

This year, Trump sought $5.7 billion in wall funding. When Congress refused, a standoff ensued that triggered a partial government shutdown that ended when the president agreed to $1.37 billion for border barriers — far less than he wanted.

The issue landed in the courts and Trump won an early battle in July when the conservative-majority Supreme Court voted 5-4 to block a ruling by a federal judge in California that barred the Republican president from redirecting $2.5 billion in funds.

Congress has refused to meet Trump's demands to fund a wall, although it has provided some funds for border fencing and other barriers.

This year, Trump sought $5.7 billion in wall funding. When Congress refused, a standoff ensued that triggered a month-long partial government shutdown that ended when the president agreed to $1.37 billion for border barriers, far less than he wanted.

Trump then declared the emergency, vowing to divert funds from other accounts for the wall.

Transgender man loses court battle to be registered as father

An individual who is born female but later becomes male and gives birth to a child should be legally regarded as a mother, England's High Court ruled on Wednesday.

Freddy McConnell, a transgender man, wanted to be recognized as the father of his son, who was born last year, on the official birth certificate but was told he would have to be registered as the mother.

He sought legal action to quash that decision, saying it breached his and his son's rights but in a landmark ruling, Andrew McFarlane, president of the High Court's Family Division, dismissed his claim and concluded that McConnell was the mother.

"It is now medically and legally possible for an individual, whose gender is recognized in law as male, to become pregnant and give birth to their child," McFarlane said.

"Whilst that person's gender is 'male,' their parental status, which derives from their biological role in giving birth, is that of 'mother.'"

Freddy McConnell. GETTY IMAGES

McConnell, who was registered as female at birth, transitioned to live as male when aged 22, later undergoing a double mastectomy and testosterone therapy. Official details, such as his passport and health records, were amended to show his gender as male, court papers said.

In 2016, he suspended the testosterone treatment and became pregnant after undergoing intrauterine insemination fertility treatment using donor sperm, with the baby born in January 2018.

McFarlane said the issue had been "most properly and bravely" raised by McConnell and was an important matter for public debate, but related more to public policy than law.

"Down the centuries, no court has previously been required to determine the definition of 'mother' under English common law and, it seems, that there have been few comparable decisions made in other courts elsewhere in the Western World," he said.

Campaign group Stonewall called the decision deeply disappointing and said the law desperately needed to be updated.

"We believe this ruling is a missed opportunity to send a positive message and recognize all parents, including LGBT parents, for who they are," said Laura Russell, its director of communications. REUTERS

Cut emissions to avert catastrophic sea-level rise: UN climate report

Warming oceans under threat, could rise 3 feet by 2100.

News conference to present the "Ocean and Cryosphere in a Changing Climate" report in Monaco, Sept. 25, 2019. REUTERS

Scientists behind a landmark study of the links between oceans, glaciers, ice caps and the climate delivered a stark warning to the world on Wednesday: Slash emissions or watch cities vanish under rising seas, rivers run dry and marine life collapse.

Days after millions of young people demanded an end to the fossil-fuel era in protests around the globe, a new report by a U.N.-backed panel of experts found that radical action may yet avert some of the worst possible outcomes of global warming.

But the study was clear that allowing carbon emissions to continue rising would upset the balance of the geophysical systems governing oceans and the frozen regions of the Earth so profoundly that nobody would escape untouched.

"We are in a race between two factors, one is the capacity of humans and ecosystems to adapt, the other is the speed of impact of climate change. This report...indicates we may be losing in this race. We need to take immediate and drastic action to cut emissions right now," IPCC Chair Hoesung Lee said at the presentation of the report in Monaco.

Finalized on Tuesday in a marathon 27-hour session of talks in Monaco between authors and representatives of governments, the report was the culmination of two years' efforts by the U.N.-backed Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change (IPCC).

Compiled by more than 100 authors who crunched 7,000 academic papers, the study documents the implications of warming oceans, fast-melting ice sheets in Greenland and Antarctica and shrinking glaciers for more than 1.3 billion people living in low-lying or high-mountain regions.

The report projects that sea levels could rise by one meter (3.3 feet) by 2100 — 10 times the rate in the 20th century — if emissions keep climbing. The rise could exceed five meters by 2300.

In the Himalayas, glaciers feeding 10 rivers, including the Ganges and Yangtze, could shrink dramatically if emissions do not fall, hitting water supplies across a swathe of Asia.

Thawing permafrost in places like Alaska and Siberia could release vast quantities of greenhouse gases, potentially unleashing feedback loops driving faster warming.

The IPCC galvanized global concern over climate change in October when it published a report that showed the world would need to halve emissions over the next decade to stand a chance of meeting the temperature goals in the 2015 Paris Agreement. REUTERS

Death toll rises to 37 in Pakistan earthquake: Officials

The death toll from an earthquake that struck Pakistani Kashmir jumped to 37, officials said on Wednesday, as families mourned relatives and rescue teams sent supplies to the area.

Officials said the extent of the casualties, who included young children, emerged a day after the 5.8 magnitude earthquake struck as authorities were able to reach towns and villages around the region outside main population centres.

"We had dispatched survey teams in the entire area affected by the earthquake to collect details of the victims," Muhammad Tayyab, divisional commissioner for Mirpur, one of the worst affected areas, told Reuters, adding that around 500 people had been injured.

Tuesday's earthquake leveled homes and shops and split open roads in an area between the towns of Jhelum and Mirpur to the north, part of which is in Pakistan's portion of the disputed territory of Kashmir.

Netanyahu tapped by Israel's president to form new government

Israeli presidents pick the PM after elections; last week's was a deadlock.

Israel's president tasked Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu on Wednesday with assembling a new government after power-sharing talks with his strongest rival, Benny Gantz, failed following an inconclusive election.

But right-wing Likud party chief Netanyahu, facing a looming indictment on corruption allegations he denies, still has no clear path to a fifth term after emerging from the Sept. 17 ballot, the second this year, short of a parliamentary majority.

Accepting the mandate from President Reuven Rivlin at a televised ceremony, a politically weakened Netanyahu said his chances of success were only marginally higher than those of Gantz, a former general who heads the Blue and White party.

In his remarks, Netanyahu seemed to envision a scenario in which he and Gantz would be able to take another stab at power-sharing once it became clear there was no way out of the current deadlock, save for a third election that few in Israel wanted.

"If I don't succeed, I will return the mandate to you and with the help of God and Israel's citizens and yourself, Mr. President, we will establish a broad national unity government down the line," he said.

Netanyahu, 69 and Israel's longest-serving leader, will have 28 days to form a coalition and can ask Rivlin for a two-week extension if necessary. Netanyahu's failure to clinch victory in a ballot in April led to last week's election.

Rivlin, in his remarks, pointedly noted that he is under no obligation to grant his prime minister-designate that two-week extension to establish a governing coalition.

Nor did he commit to turning to Gantz if Netanyahu failed to break the current deadlock. Under law, Rivlin can assign the coalition-building task to any member of parliament he deems likely to succeed, or he can ask the legislature to pick someone.

With final results announced on Wednesday, Likud has the pledged support of 55 legislators in the 120-member parliament, against 54 for Blue and White. The two parties failed to reach a coalition deal in talks launched on Tuesday.

"It became clear that neither Netanyahu nor Gantz had the 61 seats necessary to form a government," Rivlin said at the ceremony.

"Netanyahu's ability to assemble an administration is higher at the moment," the president said, noting that 10 Arab legislators in Gantz's support bloc of 54, who recommended he nominate the ex-general, did not commit to joining a government.

Rivlin had until next Wednesday to announce his choice, but the Likud-Blue and White unity talks showed no sign of progress.

A deal in which Netanyahu and Gantz would take turns as prime minister was widely mooted.

In his campaign, Gantz pledged not serve in a government with Netanyahu, citing the Israeli leader's legal troubles.

Next month, Israel's attorney-general will hold a pre-trial hearing on his announced intention to indict the Israeli leader on fraud and bribery charges in three corruption cases. REUTERS

First commercial flights from Beijing's new $63 billion airport take off

ALL GETTY IMAGES

The first commercial flights from Beijing's new Daxing International airport took off on Wednesday — an airport that cost $63 billion to build, is roughly the size of 100 football fields and is expected to become one of the world's busiest.

Shaped like a phoenix — though to some observers it is more reminiscent of a starfish — the airport was designed by famed Iraqi-born architect Zaha Hadid. It boasts four runways and is expected to handle up to 72 million passengers a year by 2025, eventually reaching 100 million.

It was hailed as "a new powerful source of national development" at a ceremony overseen by President Xi Jinping, just days ahead of the 70th anniversary of the founding of the People's Republic of China.

China is forecast to overtake the United States as the world's largest aviation market by 2022.

A China Southern Airlines Airbus A380 flight to Guangzhou in the country's south was the first to fly out.

China is forecast to overtake the United States as the world's largest aviation market by 2022.

Daxing, located south of Beijing, will help ease pressure on Capital International Airport in the city's northeast, where capacity constraints often cause flight delays.

The new airport is, however, about 29 miles away from central Beijing, almost twice the distance of Capital airport. An express train from Daxing will take about 20 minutes to reach the south of Beijing.

Daxing will also accommodate passengers from the neighboring areas of Hebei and Tianjin, linked by a sprawling network of trains, subways and public buses.

China Southern Airlines and China Eastern Airlines will be the main domestic carriers at Daxing. About 50 foreign airlines, including British Airways and Finnair, plan to move all or part of their operations in the next few quarters.

The relocation of all airlines is to due to be completed by the Winter 2021.

With the opening of Daxing, Beijing Nanyuan Airport, China's oldest airport, will cease operations from Thursday.

INFLATABLE POOL SEASON IS OVER!

It's time to drain the inflatable pools, clean out the dead leaves and debris and put them away till next summer. They are a breeding ground for West Nile virus and other mosquito-related diseases. When I was walking in my neighborhood, I saw a pool filled with leaves and polluted water. Surely no one is going to take a dip in there. So take down the pool and put up the Halloween decorations.

I'd rather a Halloween treat than a West Nile/EEE fright.

Marchánt Davis talks breakout film role.

MOLLY GIVEN
Molly.Given@metro.us

Marchánt Davis plays Moses in “The Day Shall Come.” ALL PHOTOS IFC FILMS

In 2006 seven members of a so-called “bizarre cult” were arrested and charged with terrorism-related offenses after the FBI launched a sting operation into the group’s supposed criminal activity. What was later discovered about the now-deemed “Liberty City Seven” was that the group, in reality, had no plans of revolution, no weapons and no communication with any terrorist organizations whatsoever.

This story captivated director Chris Morris, and the U.K. native turned the harrowingly real story into a truthful satirical dark comedy that showcases just how easy it is to create terror out of stigmatized misconceptions. “The Day Shall Come” follows the story of a similar “radical” group and their journey to save their home. Although the film touches on very real subjects, the overall innate comedic undertones help shape the feature to be hilariously interesting but also severely eye-opening.

Metro sat down with Marchánt Davis, who plays the charismatic yet desperately naive leader of the FBI’s targeted “radical” group, and the breakout star gave the scoop on how it was working on the film and what he hopes audiences take away from it.

This is your first film role after acting on Broadway. How was making the transition from the stage to the screen?
It’s a lot, especially when you have so much to do. Up on stage, you have a performance that you have to repeat eight times a week, where with film you only get to do it once. I think the level of confidence you have in order to do certain things is vastly different — or it was for me, at least.

How else did you prepare for your role?
There was a book I read called “How White Folks Got So Rich: The Untold Story of American White Supremacy,” which was given to me by the director. It’s actually a really interesting book and I encourage everyone to read it. But I also watched documentaries. I just wanted to see a little bit inside this world because there is a lot there and there are a lot of things I simply didn’t know. It’s crazy how [in the world] today you’re really guilty until proven innocent.

How was it working with Chris Morris? I’ve heard he has an interesting directing style where things are always changing.
It was really great. Chris is one of those people who does an enormous amount of research before we even start. On set, there were times where we would be doing a reading and then we would go to lunch, and one day I remember specifically that Chris came up and handed me a script. I asked, “Is this for tomorrow?” But he says, “No, for later on today.” The scene he handed me was the scene we had just done already, but Chris re-wrote it during lunch. He is one of those directors who was constantly looking to make it better. He just wanted to elevate the story in any way he could. There would be times where we would be on set and he would just throw out whatever he was thinking. It was really exciting to work with someone so wildly imaginative and Chris is also extremely truthful and respectful of the people he puts up on screen.

This is a satirical comedy that focuses more on serious subjects. What do you think the comedic aspect brings to tackling these social issues?
Well, you’ve got to laugh in life. One of the things Chris says beautifully about his work is that it’s funny until it isn’t. It’s funny until the carpet is pulled out from underneath the character and the audience in terms of what we’re watching. I think that’s a great way to put it.

There are a few points in the movie that allude to your character, Moses, as having some sort of mental illness, but it’s never quite confirmed. What was your take on that?
I think what motivates him in this film is his love for his family. He’s trying to get money to get the loans he needs to save his family. So in terms of that idea of mental illness, I don’t think there’s any mental illness there, or I don’t believe he thinks there is, at least. I think he’s a visionary and sometimes his visions might not always be clear, but at the end of the day, he’s the ultimate optimist. I think he’s trying to win and succeed and at moments, he is a little flawed in his choices to succeed.

Overall what do you hope audiences take away from the film after watching it?
My hope is that people take away the fact that it might be harder to catch a terrorist than it is to create your own. I hope people examine their ideas and thoughts on terrorism and people of color in this country. It is a comedy, but there is a lot of truth — especially for me, because I live it every day.

Metro's guide to the 57th New York Film Festival

This year's festival will run from Sep. 27 to Oct. 13.

PAT KING
patrick.king@metro.us

Starting this Friday, the New York Film Festival will be taking over Lincoln Center for two full weeks with exclusive premieres of some of the fall's most anticipated releases. The festival, in its 57th year, will span five different theaters, with retrospectives and special talks from some of the biggest names in film including Martin Scorsese, Bong Joon Ho, and Pedro Almodòvar. With so many special screenings, we thought we would give our picks for some of the "must-see" films at this year's festival.

"THE IRISHMAN"

Kicking off the festival on Friday is possibly the most anticipated film at the festival — or of the year, for that matter. "The Irishman" is the latest mobster epic from legendary film director Martin Scorsese. The film stars such high-pedigree Scorsese alumni with Robert De Niro, Al Pacino, Harvey Keitel, and Joe Pesci as well as newcomers like Jesse Plemmons, Anna Paquin, and Ray Romano. The story follows a hardened hitman, Frank "The Irishman" Sheeran, played by De Niro, and his involvement with the disappearance of the notorious teamster, Jimmy Hoffa, played by Pacino. The film has been in the news for both it's incredibly long-running length — three-and-a-half hours! — and the bidding frenzy it has created between its exclusive streaming rights with Netflix and theaters who would like the film to screen. For what it's worth, seeing a new Scorsese film on the big screen is something you should never pass up.

"MARRIAGE STORY"

Noah Baumbach has been releasing films that tackle the problems that come with "adulthood" in the most searing, brutally honest, and hilarious ways possible. His newest feature, "Marriage Story," stars Scarlett Johansson and Adam Driver as a soon-to-be-divorced couple, Nicole and Charlie, as they feud over the custody of their child. Laura Dern plays Nicole's divorce lawyer and Alan Alda and Ray Liotta play Charlie's counsel. The follow-up to Baumbach's masterful "The Meyerowitz Stories (New and Selected)," expect this film to pack equal amounts gut-punches and laughs.

"MOTHERLESS BROOKLYN"

Actor Edward Norton has been pretty quiet over the past few years. But, that may be because he has been hard at work on perhaps his most ambitious project to date. His new film, "Motherless Brooklyn," which he wrote, directed, produced and stars in, is a murky noir set in the 1950s with Norton playing a P.I with Tourette's syndrome who is trying to get to the bottom of the suspicious death of his mentor in the field. The film is based on the novel by Jonathan Lethem and also stars Bruce Willis, Gugu Mbatha-Raw, Bobby Cannavale, Cherry Jones, Alec Baldwin, and Willem Dafoe. If anything, seeing if Norton delivers on such an auteur and immersive undertaking will be worth checking out.

"PAIN AND GLORY"

Whenever Pedro Almodòvar releases a film, it is generally cause for celebration. His newest film, "Pain and Glory," sees the singular filmmaker partnering back up with his frequent collaborators Antonio Banderas and Penelope Cruz. The story revolves around an old filmmaker named Salvador Mallo, played by Banderas, who is losing

"The Irishman" (2019) stars Ray Romano (Bill Bufalino), Al Pacino (Jimmy Hoffa) and Robert De Niro (Frank Sheeran). NIKO TAVERNISE / NETFLIX his influence.

"PARASITE"

South Korean filmmaker Bong Joon Ho is one of the greatest living satirists taking aim at the rigid economic divide around the world. His newest film, "Parasite," has been wowing critics and piling up awards for his masterful storytelling. Metro's James Case had the chance to see Joon Ho's newest masterpiece, which won the Palme d'Or at this year's Cannes Film Festival, going in length on the hypnotic nature of the film, saying in his review, "Joon-ho's narrative deeply knows the cumulative effect that our daily conditions have on how we make our decisions. Each character's decisions are relatable and understandable, whether it's an outburst of violence or the effects of a series of slights and insults. The notion of free will feels minimized when seeing that sometimes there really is only one choice to be made. Seeing 'Parasite' should be one of those." This one is not to be missed.

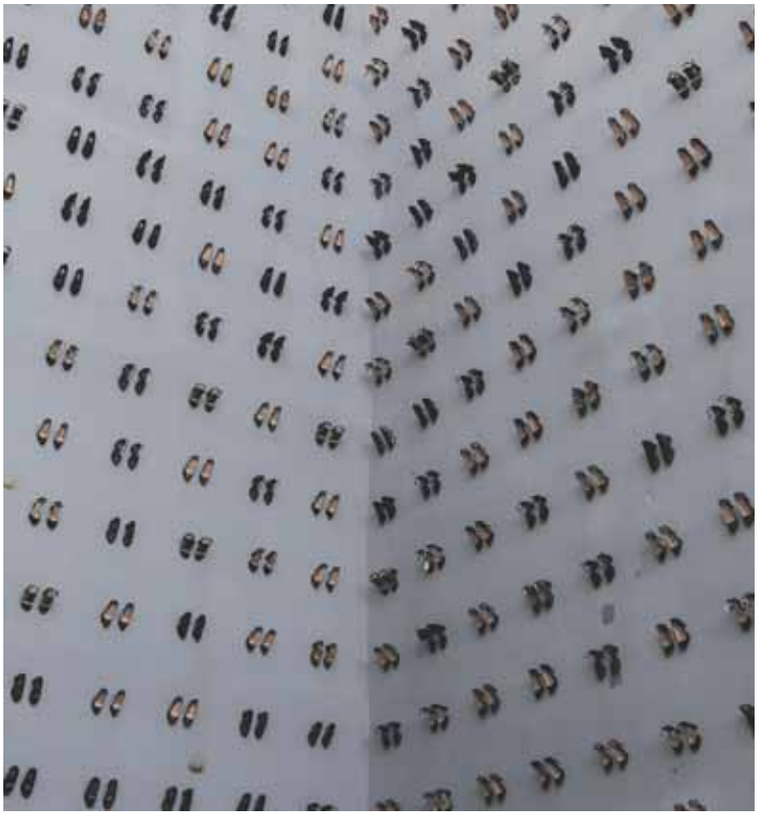
This wall commemorates murdered women in Turkey



Protest against domestic abuse

A wall of women's shoes has recently appeared in Istanbul, Turkey. The memorial, called "Untitled" and created by Turkish artist Vahit Tuna, is set to commemorate the hundreds of women killed by their partners in domestic violence cases last year. The open-air art installation that will be on display for six months seeks to impact passers-by and raise awareness about the issue.

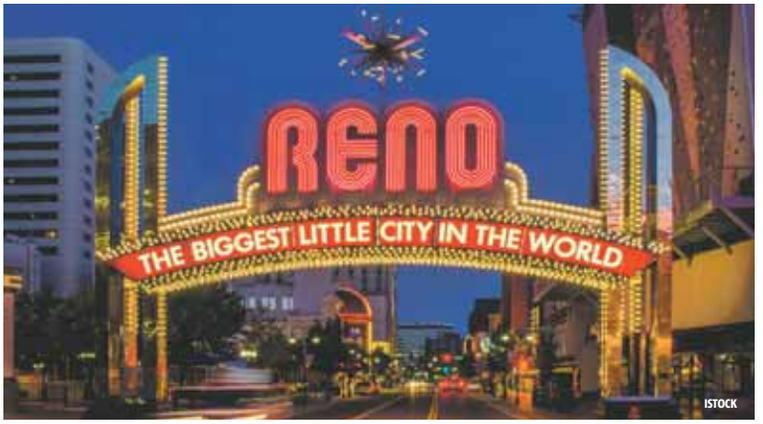
Cheaper alternatives to 4 popular vacation spots



ISTOCK

NerdWallet is a personal finance website.

The golden rule of affordable travel is to visit places when or where it isn't busy. Even you don't have a lot of flexibility on the "when," you can always tweak the "where" — and even a small location change has the potential to save you big.

The travel website TripAdvisor recently looked at the most popular Summer 2019 vacation spots in the United States and found big savings on hotels at affordable alternative destinations. Here are some of their recommendations.

Kissimmee instead of Orlando

It's not a huge surprise that Orlando, Florida, was the most popular summer destination in the United States this year. After all, Orlando is home to some of the country's most popular theme parks, which are unveiling new elements this year that are likely to produce even larger crowds than usual. Disney World is slated to open a highly anticipated new Star Wars-themed land in late August, and Universal Studios recently added a new roller coaster called "Hagrid's Magical Creatures Motorbike Adventure" to the Wizarding World of Harry Potter.

To save money on your Orlando vacation, consider staying in nearby Kissimmee, Florida. Kissimmee is less than 20 miles away from Disney and Universal, meaning you can have all of the fun without the expensive hotel rates. According to TripAdvisor, the average summer nightly hotel rate in Kissimmee is $137, which is 37 percent less than the $216 average nightly rate in Orlando. Even when you factor in the cost of a rental car, staying in Kissimmee will likely still leave you with money left over for some theme park funnel cake.

Reno instead of Las Vegas

Las Vegas may have all the flashing lights of the Strip, but the northern alternative of Reno, Nevada, still has plenty of gambling and hotel pool parties to satisfy many travelers' idea of letting loose for vacation. Reno is also close to Lake Tahoe, which offers incredible views, hiking and water activities during the summer.

Save an average of 14 percent per night by going to Reno instead of Las Vegas, with an average nightly hotel rate of $144 in Reno, according to TripAdvisor.

Kill Devil Hills instead of Myrtle Beach

Myrtle Beach, South Carolina, is a popular family-friendly beach vacation town, but if all you and the kids need for a quiet getaway is waves, sand and a cute little beach house, you might want to look into a vacation in North Carolina's Outer Banks. Kill Devil Hills offers several miles of sandy coastline that's great for lounging on the sand, kayaking, fishing, crabbing or just going for a bike ride. There's also a memorial to the Wright Brothers' first flight. A hotel room in Kill Devil Hills costs an average of $200 per night, compared to the $250 you would pay in Myrtle Beach, according to TripAdvisor.

Oahu instead of Maui

There are more airplane seats to Hawaii now that Southwest has started flying to the Aloha State. Maui is sometimes called the "playground of the wealthy" because of its upscale and expensive resorts. To make your vacation to this tropical paradise a little more affordable, stay on the island of Oahu instead, which caters to tourists of all budgets.

By choosing Oahu over Maui, TripAdvisor found that you'd save an average of 38 percent. Hotels in Maui average $533 per night, while hotels in Oahu only average $328 per night, according to their research. MEGHAN COYLE

The Islanders cut 12 players on Wednesday afternoon. GETTY IMAGES

Isles make more cuts; what will forward lines look like?

Numerous wingers are battling for a final spot on the NHL roster.

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

With the start of the 2019-20 NHL season a little more than a week away, the New York Islanders' roster is taking shape after the team announced it sent 12 more players to the AHL.

Granted, it's not that hard to forecast a team's forward lines when the roster remains largely unchanged.

The Islanders are returning 10 of their 11 full-time forwards from last year — the lone exception being Valtteri Filppula, who opted to sign with the Detroit Red Wings in free agency.

General manager Lou Lamoriello signed veteran center Derick Brassard to fill the void on the third line, but there's still one little lineup matter to take care of before Oct. 4.

Who gets the 12th forward spot?

That last man in will likely take over as the second or third-line left-winger.

Last year saw a rotation of players fill the role that would have normally belonged to Andrew Ladd. But injuries have sidelined the veteran, including a knee issue that will see him start this season on injured reserve.

It forced head coach Barry Trotz to give time to the likes of Tom Kuhnhackl, Michael Dal Colle, Josh Ho-Sang, and Ross Johnston.

All four of those players are back in the mix and so are the likes of Oliver Wahlstrom and Tanner Fritz.

On Wednesday, the Islanders assigned Mason Jobst, Kieffer Bellows, and Otto Koivula to the team's minor-league affiliate in Bridgeport.

Kuhnhackl provides the most veteran option for Trotz. The 27-year-old won two Stanley Cups with the Pittsburgh Penguins but doesn't provide much of an offensive boost for an Islanders team that had problems finding the back of the net last season.

Dal Colle, who at 23 years old carved out 28 games on the lower lines last year, had just three goals and four assists. However, he showed an affinity to play well in Trotz's defense-first system.

It creates an advantage for him, but how patient will the Islanders be if they don't see any offensive threat?

That's why so many eyes have been on Ho-Sang, the enigmatic forward who is likely getting his final chance to make the Islanders this summer.

There's no disputing the 23-year-old's promise. He can make plays almost near the same level as Mathew Barzal when he's on his day. The problem is those days are proving to be few and far between while his all-around game has been questioned.

The latest example came on Tuesday night following the Islanders' exhibition loss to the Rangers.

"I'm really proud of myself. Defense is ... it's not something I think about," Ho-Sang said (h/t NHL.com's Brian Compton). "I don't go to bed thinking about defense, but it's something that's really important to the coaches here, and I value the importance to them. I've grown to see how it leads to success."

Ho-Sang showed an ability to play that style last year in his abbreviated stint in the NHL. In his 10 games with the Islanders, they won nine games.

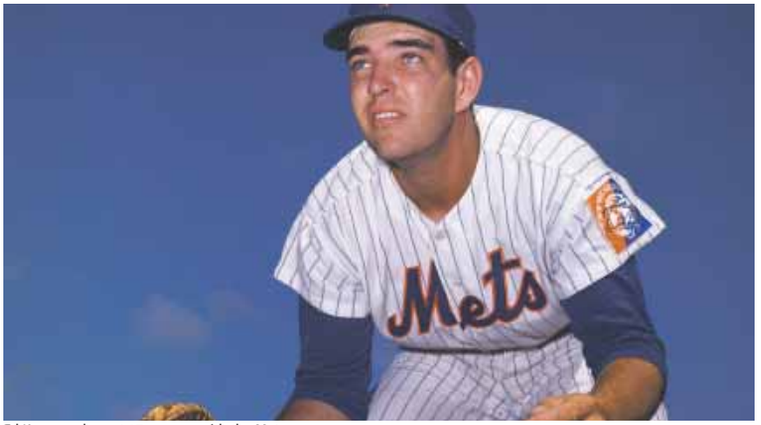
If the Islanders are committed to giving Ho-Sang one more chance, he's the last man in.

Johnston is a bruiser who can add toughness while Tanner Fritz has experience as a rotational forward.

Wahlstrom will likely need a bit more time in the AHL, though his presence this close to the start of the season suggests that he isn't far away from getting NHL playing time.

Here is how the opening-night forward lines might look:

ANDERS LEE - MATHEW BARZAL - JORDAN EBERLE
ANTHONY BEAUVILLIER - BROCK NELSON - JOSH BAILEY
JOSH HO-SANG - DERICK BRASSARD - LEO KOMAROV
MATT MARTIN - CASEY CIZIKAS - CAL CLUTTERBUCK



Ed Kranepool spent 17 seasons with the Mets. GETTY IMAGES

KRANEPOOL MUST BE NEXT MET NUMBER RETIRED

PANTORNO'S PERCH

JOE PANTORNO
@JoePantorno

The New York Mets announced Tuesday that they will retire the No. 36 jersey of pitcher Jerry Koosman during the 2020 season.

It's a rare honor bestowed on the southpaw as he will join Casey Stengel, Gil Hodges, Tom Seaver and Mike Piazza as the only Mets in franchise history to have their jersey numbers retired.

For a younger generation that never saw Koosman pitch, he was the No. 2 man behind the Hall of Famer Seaver — and one of the best pitchers the organization has ever had.

He ranks third in franchise history in wins (140) and strikeouts (1,799), as well as sixth in ERA (3.09).

Koosman also ranks second in innings pitched (2,544.2), games started (346), complete games (108), and shutouts (26) over 12 seasons with the club.

The 76-year-old will best be remembered for his performance in the clinching Game 5 of the 1969 World Series against the Baltimore Orioles when he pitched a complete game in which he allowed three runs on five hits in 5-3 victory.

Koosman was 2-0 in that Fall Classic, posting a 2.04 ERA in 17.2 innings pitched. He was 4-0 in his postseason career with the Mets, winning an additional game in the 1973 NLCS against the Cincinnati Reds before a Game 5 gem against the Oakland Athletics in the World Series.

The decision by the Mets to retire Koosman's number came with a promise from team COO Jeff Wilpon that he will look into easing up on their number retirement policy — potentially opening the door for the likes of Keith Hernandez, Gary Carter, and David Wright to see their digits adorned atop Citi Field.

In time, they absolutely deserve that honor.

But not before Ed Kranepool and his No. 7 jersey.

The original Mr. Met, Kranepool made his MLB debut with the club as a 17-year-old and proceeded to spend all 17 years of his career with the organization.

By no means do his numbers make him a star, considering he played a franchise-record 1,853 games with the team. He ranks third in hits (1,418), third in total bases (2,047), fourth in doubles (225), fifth in RBI (614), and ninth in runs scored (536).

But Kranepool was THE original Met.

And it's something that the organization can't really boast too often.

For example, the crosstown Yankees have 15 players in franchise history that have appeared in more games with the club than Kranepool as a Met. Eight of them are Hall of Famers while Derek Jeter will soon be the ninth.

The Mets simply don't have that.

Wright's career was ransacked by injuries or he would have been the guy.

Jose Reyes was traded away.

Seaver was traded away.

Doc Gooden and Darryl Strawberry's careers were derailed by drugs.

Carter and Keith Hernandez were acquired by the Mets via trade, played integral roles as veterans in winning the 1986 World Series, and still didn't finish their careers with the club.

Ed Kranepool came up a Met, stayed a Met, won as a Met, lost as a Met, and retired as a Met.

He was there for four 100-plus-loss seasons in five years from 1963-1967.

He socked a three-run home run in Game 3 of the 1969 World Series. He played in the 1973 World Series and played under six managers.

He was one of the most recognizable and beloved faces of an organization that has little to celebrate in their 57 years of existence.

He's a Met for life. And you don't see that too often.

Before any other number receives the royal treatment in Queens, Ed Kranepool's is the next up.
